

Kaguya looked around, she had finally been able to find an open window she could get through in her search for a little bit of food, and perhaps a nice warm place to sleep through the night since it was slowly but surely creeping up on her.

Walking away from the window she managed to jump down onto a table below the frame, she was curious about this however, the table seemed to be placed ready for someone to dine at it, though the person living in the home was nowhere to be seen. She snuck over to one of the plates of food, reaching out she grabbed a piece of the meat there and started nomming on it.

In addition to the meat she saw what seemed like a glass of milk, not having had that in a while she sure wanted a taste, running over she had to climb a little bit to properly reach into it to drink. Taking a couple of sips before jumping back down, she didn't want to fall into the glass after all. This was however where things started feeling kind of strange to her.

The glass she had just jumped down from seemed to be getting a bit smaller compared to her, and it did not take too long before she noticed a very large difference between her usual tiny size and having to actually jump off of the table now so she didn't break it. It didn't take long before she was standing at what could be considered a normal size by the size. Looking at herself and even pinching her arm to make sure it was not a dream. "Ow..." It was not indeed. Glancing back down to the glass of milk she picked it up in her hand.

"Is this what is doing it?" She said to herself, looking over it, seemed like just a normal glass of milk. She had no idea how this was able to make her grow back to normal, and now she was curious if it could do more. Drinking the rest of the contents of the glass before placing it back down on the table. She stumbled around a bit as it took effect once more, the same strange feeling. She soon bumped her head against the roof above, and it only took a mere couple of seconds before her whole form bursted through the roof of the house she had snuck into.

"Uwaaah!" She flailed her arms around a bit, her movements destroying the house easily, not even doing it on purpose, she was not even used to being this size and had no idea how to act careful or normal around the smaller house. Her feet, clad in her usual tabi socks and geta sandals easily kicked apart the walls as she fell backwards, landing right on top of the neighboring house now.

The house resisted for a short moment before her ass landing on it broke through and she landed on the ground instead, her hands resting against the ground behind her and she leaned backwards in shock. She could still not believe what was going on. One hand moving over to dig through the rubble of the house she had just landed on top of, picking up some of the tiny contents, as well as some poor tiny person she had unfortunately crushed underneath her weight.

"Sorry about this...Uuuh. Oh well, guess you can't really hear me anymore anyways." She stated, dropping the body back into their destroyed house. Shifting her form so the rest of the walls fell down, using her hands to help push herself back into a standing position as well now. She was not sure how tall she was, though she sure was tall enough to easily tower over a normal house, and seeing the larger buildings in the downtown area she could even compare herself to them.

She did not show much care for vehicles and people on the ground beneath, which could come as a surprised considering she knew the world as a tiny and how terrible it was when the larger people did not pay attention to where they are walking. Her geta sandals landed with a loud crash on top of a van now, crushing it into nothing as she continued moving towards the downtown area, and she soon reached the first building there.

“Oooh...I wonder how big I actually am.” She had gone from a mere 8cm in size to 21m in a moment's notice, and she had a lot of feelings and ideas coming into her mind. Though one thing caught her eye as she was there, a truck that seemed to contain milk, perhaps even the same type of milk she had drank which made her this tall. Reaching down she grabbed it, leaning onto the building behind her, cracking the walls with her back and she ripped off the back of this milk truck.

“So much...It feels like it is less than what was in the glass though.” With a shrug she placed the back end of the truck against her lips, drinking the contents with several gulps, tossing the now empty truck back onto the ground and moving away from the building again. Each gulp of the milk had made her grow another couple of meters as well. She had gone from 21m to a total of 50m, more than twice her original giant size from the growth. She certainly loved every moment of this however.

“I want to experience everything at this size...and well, I am sorry to say little people in the town, though you miiight just end up being in the way. Oh well.” She placed a hand against her lips as she giggled. Skipping deeper into the town with massive footfalls, leaving cracks in the streets where she stepped and every now and then she even bumped into the buildings surrounding her.

She was excited to no end, this was going to be all sorts of fun!